End of an era for Terry and Michelle

By Ruth Grundy

It is the end of what has been a busy era.
And it's time for new beginnings and more time with family.

Yesterday, Terry and Michelle Walsh officially handed over the keys of Mobil Omarama – The Omarama Service Station Ltd – to Tasman Fuels.

"It's been so enjoyable, it's been hard, extremely hard, and we haven't always got it right." Terry said about their time at the helm.

"We really want to thank the community – they have been a massive support. The big thing is, we're not leaving town ... and we're only a phone call away. At the end of the day we've put in 14 years and now it's time to start spending time with the family but we're not running away from the community, we're just downsizing," he said.

"We're not leaving town we're still living in Omarama," Michelle said.

Terry and Michelle bought the service station in 2009 and they moved from a partnership in Clyde to running a business here in their own right, with Terry spending the first three months living at the camping ground while they set up.

The couple have been working through their "20- year plan" to "work as hard as we can" and get to at least semi-retirement a little earlier.

"We're getting closer to it."

They still have Mobil Twizel and plan to for a "few more years yet", they said.

Most of the present staff – Lynda, Jazz, Gary, Dan and Tom - are moving to work with Terry and Michelle in Twizel. Rowena is planning a move to Christchurch.

The couple wanted to thank all the staff for their loyalty, in particular, long-time employee Lynda Allen.

"Lynda has been so loyal, a stalwart who has stepped up whenever is required and at short notice – she's part of the family."

Over the years, Terry, a qualified mechanic, has been happy to share his knowledge, training several apprentices including Daniel Aitken and Tom Trusler, who will come out of his time in a couple of months, and he has been keen to build his own knowledge, recently completing an automotive electrical apprenticeship.

Downsizing to one business will mean more time to spend at their holiday home in Blenheim and more time with the family. There's Dani, who is in the Royal New Zealand Navy, Alana has just graduated and is off on her OE, Dom is combining Year 13 at Waitaki Boys High School with some university papers, and Lillie, who is in year 13 at Columba College and will spend a semester in the US, and, of course there's young Mick – Terry's Dad.

Eventually, Terry and Michelle plan to retire to Blenheim.

Working life at the Ōmārama Service Station has never been dull and the highlight has been meeting new customers who become lifelong friends, Terry and Michelle said.

Included in the mix of work and school days has been volunteering for the Ōmārama Fire Brigade where Terry was Chief Fire Officer for three years before taking a break. He has since returned as senior fire fighter.

Once, while working on a Sunday with former employee Graeme Westgarth, and he wasn't sure why, he had a strong compulsion to linger on into the afternoon.

"I wasn't meant to be there, I was meant to be in Wanaka."

And then from pump three, a woman rushed in with her baby in her arms. The child had choked on a cruskit and was non-responsive.

With his training Terry was able to resuscitate the child. That would always be a special memory, he said.

On another occasion the couple were caught up in a 'drive-off' which led to a string of serious offences.

It was "terrifying but funny at the same time", Michelle said.

At one point the offender tried to "ram" Terry and Michelle in their car, then, suddenly, the tables were turned and he was chasing them. It sparked a 200km police chase. I should never have done it, I'll never do that again," Terry said, laughing. "I don't know what I was going to do [if I caught him]."

Drive offs are "the biggest bugbear" about owning a service station, Michelle said

Rental car drivers were frequent offenders and often there was no recourse at all, she said.

The impact of Covid-19 had forced business models to evolve and change, Terry said.

It was what led to him opening the workshop in Twizel.

Covid had "decimated" Ōmārama.

"We had to find another source of income."

"That's what businesses had to do, that's life, they had to evolve," Michelle said.

Although their Ōmārama workshop has closed, the Twizel workshop was just twenty minutes up the road and Terry and Michelle look forward to welcoming Ōmārama customers there.

They have offered to assist if anyone needs to get vehicles to Twizel for servicing and warrants. They are happy to pick up vehicles and deliver them back to Ōmārama at the end of the working day.

Introducing Tasman Fuels

Tasman Fuels are “very excited to be in the community”.

The new “unmanned” fuel stop will be open by the end of this week, Tasman Fuels development officer and shareholder Alain Bourgogne said.

The company, which supplies customers from its terminal at PrimePort Timaru, is New Zealand’s newest oil company, established in 2020. There are two divisions; Tasman Oil Services deals with the importation of fuel and Tasman Fuels is the distribution and marketing arm, Mr Bourgogne said.

The Ōmārama site is the third the company has opened and it hoped to have 10 to 12 outlets open by the end of 2023, he said. The first was set up at Springs Rd, in Christchurch, and the second opened in December last year, in Timaru.

Mr Bourgogne will be in Ōmārama next week and is looking forward to meeting with people.

He said the company was looking for someone to take up a lease for the shop and it would like that to be a local – “to benefit the town”.

The company was focussed on selling fuel and not food and drinks and so on, he said.

Mr Bourgogne has lived in New Zealand for 35 years and has loved travelling the country.

“I know the roads very well.”

“For me Ōmārama is like [the town of] Springs Junction – an important crossroads.”

The Ōmārama site would be open within the next few days “when all systems are in place”.

Because it was an unmanned service station it could offer reasonably-priced fuel, Mr Bourgogne said.

Preparations are well in hand for the opening of Tasman Fuels' Omarama site by the end of the week

Changes to postal services

A message from Four Square Omarama

As of 'close of business' on Friday, January 27, 2023 - Four Square Ōmārama will be stepping back from the service of sorting NZ Post mail and parcels.

The retail service side of NZ Post will remain in place i.e. you can still buy post bags, stamps and send parcels etc (both domestic and international) from the Four Square.

Communication from NZ Post regarding this has also been distributed to all PO Boxes/Private Bags (see over).

For many years Four Square Ōmārama have managed the NZ Postal Service alongside the supermarket - however due to ongoing challenges of staff shortages and increasing volumes re: Post/Parcel deliveries, we are simply just not able to sustain both moving forward.

First and foremost our core business is Grocery, and as such - all our available resource needs to focus within the supermarket. Please know this decision was not made lightly or in haste.

Please note the following - in efforts to assist in a smooth transition:

- Please ensure all your mail/parcels are addressed to your own physical address as we will no longer be in the position to accept parcels on your behalf that are addressed: C/O Four Square Omarama or 10 Chain Hills Highway. This relates to ALL courier companies (NZ Couriers, Aramex (formerly Fastways) Lakeline, PBT etc)
- All PO Box holders will also need their PO Box keys - as Omarama Four Square staff will no longer have access to the Post room.
- As per communication from NZ Post over – please contact them directly with any queries at omaru@nzpost.co.nz

Thanks - Ōmārama Four Square

Rest in Peace, Kevin

Kevin Grant, dearly loved husband of Carolynne, died at home in Ōmārama, on Tuesday. Thank you, Kevin, for your dedicated service to our town and for your lifelong commitment to our community.

Our sincerest condolences to Carolynne, Julie, and Aaron and your families, and to Kevin's very many friends.

Kevin, you not only made your mark on our landscape but also on our hearts.

Kevin's funeral will be Tuesday, February 7, at the Ōmārama Memorial Hall at a time to be advised.

Below is a story written in February 2019 which tells only a little of Kevin's lifetime of service.

Kevin Grant - Earthmover and Shaper

As Kevin Grant casts his expert eye around the surrounding hills, he agrees, yes, there's a great deal of the countryside he's had a hand in shaping.

A man of few words – listen carefully because each one of those matter – he downplays the nearly six decades he has spent breaking ground, making tracks, clearing chaos, and quietly making his mark on the landscape.

He isn't convinced anyone would be that interested in hearing about his life's work.

Monday, he 'dropped everything' and headed to the Tara Hills Station fire to put his skills to use there in his capacity as a volunteer member of the rural fire fighting logistics team. He'll down-play that too. All in a day's work.

His role – to 'expose' the burning hay bales so firefighters could get to the 'seat of fire', and to dig trenches and bury any embers to lessen the risk of it re-igniting.

Kevin grew up in Otekaieke, where his family farmed. After attending primary school there, he would bus to Waitaki Boys' High School in Oamaru and back each day. But he reckons he's had "diesel in the blood from day one". So, it was almost inevitable, as little more than a young lad, he would begin driving heavy machinery. "I've been going since I was 15, I'm 74 this year [2019]."

Driving a dozer, working for a private contractor, his first major project was to help create the system of canals and flood irrigation channels which make up the Upper Waitaki Irrigation Scheme (Now called the Kurow and Duntroon Irrigation Company Scheme). Construction will begin this year to upgrade that scheme to a piped system which will continue to take water from the Waitaki River just below the Waitaki Dam and distribute it across the plains south of the river.

In 1965, he married Carolynne and it was no coincidence they began married life in Omarama. He was as pragmatic at 19 as he is now. His new job as a grader driver for the Ministry of Works came with a house – the perfect set-up for a newly-married couple. At the time, the depot and the heavy machinery stationed there was key to maintaining the main roads north, south and east of the town. The road from Otematata to Omarama, from Omarama north to Buscot station backpackers, and from Killermont Station to the top of the Lindis were gravel roads, Kevin said.

Back then there were no holiday homes in Omarama, only permanent residents lived in what was primarily a rural servicing town. There was the motel which later became the Omarama Motor Lodge and is now Heritage Gateway Hotel, the Rabbit Board staff and families, plus quite a large community which managed and ran what was the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry scientific research station at Tara Hills.

The population of Omarama would have been under 200, he said, and the town extended as far east as Sutherland Rd.

By 1969, Kevin was working for a private contractor - JR Bishop - who had the job of building a new Omarama subdivision for the Waitaki County Council. The task included creating three cul-de-sacs which extended the township eastwards to just past Totara Peak Cres. As 2IC for Bishop, with 45 staff, together they tackled roading jobs like the Shotover Bridge approaches, the realignment of SH1 at Shag Point, and the bulk of the main race for the Lower Waitaki Irrigation Scheme.

By then the Grants and their young family were stationed in Herbert. James and Julie were born in Otematata and the youngest, Aaron, was born in Queenstown. But "I was never home", he says regretfully.

It was the time of the great construction projects and he worked throughout the South Island. Closer to home his crew was employed as "daily hire" to help work on the Upper Waitaki Hydro Scheme canals, at Twizel – they had their own separate camp on the construction project. And it was about that time the highway was extended from Otematata to Sailors Cutting.

In 1982, he made the decision to "go out on my own", bought a D6 bulldozer and hired himself out for "farm work". It wasn't the best of times - drought and removal of farm subsidies hit North Otago farmers hard - but it was that economic downturn which brought the family back to Omarama – there was more work up this way.

A lot of the work was "track work" or "general drains" but the winter slowdown on the farm saw him take up the job of keeping the Ohau Ski-field access road clear through winter. "It filled in the winters, there's not a lot of dozer work in the winter."

It was sometimes precarious work which caused a few worries "for others", but didn't worry him overly, he says. With interest rates on loans in the 1980's soaring to 27% there had to be money coming in regularly to pass back to the bank. However, he does confess he'd not be worried if he "never saw another snowflake".

When the Omarama Gazette catches up with him he's working in 30-plus degree heat, but he doesn't mind that. He's now on his fifth digger – a Caterpillar 312C Hydraulic Excavator – bought in 2008 which has clocked up 12,000 hours.

Quite a substantial number of those hours have been spent volunteering. As well as fire-fighting duties, Kevin's helped out with earthworks for the Golf Club, the Omarama Hall and Community Centre and the Fire Station, to name just a few projects. "You live in the community, you do your bit," he says.

Retirement's on the cards but not yet. The work is so varied, and because he's a 'one-man-band' he scarcely ever sits still. His checks his fitness app which tells him he climbed the equivalent of 57 flights of stairs and trekked about 7.5km the previous day.

Clearing drains is not so much fun but he does like the farm track work, and he's also enjoyed using that exacting eye to create landscaped gardens.

"You can see where you've been at the end of the day." Surveying the lie of the land, and getting down to work and sculpting out the required design has become almost instinctive but it still requires absolute concentration, not only so the client's requirements are met, exactly, but also for safety.

"You have to be conscious of what you are doing all the time, you do get the odd fright - it brings you back to reality."

As we scan the hills he admits, "There's not much of this country I haven't been over" – and points out the Vodafone tower overlooking Otematata, 460m up, at Tin Hat Bluff.

Maurice Cowie - the quiet legend

It is with a great deal of pride the Ōmārama community acknowledges the recent conferring of the Queen's Service Medal (QSM) for services to Search and Rescue on our own Maurice Cowie – our quiet legend.

The New Year Honour comes as Fire and Emergency New Zealand also plans to honour Maurice on Saturday with 50-year medal presentation at the Ōmārama Fire Station.

Tributes have streamed in from around the country in response to these honours. To you both, Maurice and Elizabeth, let us tell you it's quite difficult for us to express the same sentiments over and over again and have them read differently to the previous tribute.

"Maurice, you are one of the best!"

"We cannot think of anyone more deserving," are the repeated themes.

"Congratulations Maurice, well deserved, I always knew that our paper run man would get rewarded for all his voluntary work, Ōmārama folk are lucky to have you looking after them."

There is so much you both give behind the scenes that most know nothing about – and certainly much more than can ever be acknowledged.

Our volunteer groups – Search and Rescue, the Ōmārama Volunteer Fire Brigade, the Ōmārama Shed Group, the Residents' Association and now the Community Gardens, to name a few, would be nothing without you.

In his day job, Maurice is much more than an employee. He has worked for more than 40 years for the Patterson family in all aspects of farm work – always reliable, loyal, a problem solver, a wise counsellor, a 'hero' – not to mention lighting up the day with that wry sense of humour and dry wit.

It was that dry wit and an eagle eye that more than qualified Maurice for the role of the first ever Fire Brigade 'Sheriff'.

It was former chief fire officer Terry Walsh who appointed Maurice.

"It was the worst decision I ever made," Terry said.

Since then, it has been Maurice's job to catch out Fire Brigade volunteers in misdemeanours or infringements and bring the unfortunate 'offenders' to account.

"He doesn't miss a trick, sometimes you wish he would," Terry said.

In 2020, Maurice was integral to the first response to the Lake Ōhau Village fire.

That community wishes to pass on these special words of thanks:

How do you get from Ōmārama to Ōhau in the fastest time?

Answer - have Maurice Cowie driving the fire truck. We are forever grateful to Maurice for having his foot to the metal, as the Ōmārama fire crew raced to get to our community, which was confronted with the largest wildfire in living memory, that night in October 2020.

Up and away just after 3am, driving through the night, smoke and fire - checking to see everyone was safely evacuated, defending themselves from the fire front and then working to save properties - a long hot, dangerous and arduous time.

This is the selfless community service Maurice has given over many years - we are so appreciative of it. Thank you Maurice from the Lake Ōhau community.

Maurice was also at forefront when volunteers raced to get people evacuated from properties affected when the Ōmārama Stream and Ahuriri River burst their banks last year, not resting till he had roused all got them to safety.

In December 2021, Maurice's life in the community and the backcountry he knows so well – which is what makes him such a valued member of Search and Rescue - was the subject of a book by local historian and long-time friend Lex Perriam and a 'This is Your Life' presentation.

We could go on... this email sums up all our feelings, Maurice.

"Maurice you have served your Community in so many ways - a lot of things you do for others in the area are never known about.

"We do acknowledge your 50 years of service to the Fire Service and your recent honour in being awarded the Queens Service Medal for service to Search and Rescue.

"These are both well-deserved and hard-earned achievements - Congratulations.

"Behind every great person is support from their family - thanks to Liz, Deanna, Katherine, Rebecca and Michael for being that support. A great team effort and family."

Maurice, we are all privileged to know you.

And just one more thing...Gotcha, Sherriff!

Congratulations Maurice and Liz Cowie and thank you for your years of service

Camps spark passion for flying

By Ruth Grundy

Such is the interest from young people in gliding, instructor Andrew Colby and wife Erika have bought a house in Ōmārama for a base for the enthusiastic wannabe glider pilots.

Last month about 20 young people from throughout the South Island, with a strong contingent from Central Otago, took part in a week-long Youth Glide New Zealand Soaring Development Camp hosted by the Ōmārama Gliding Club.

The annual week of flying, fun and friendship, which is run by volunteer instructors and pilots, is based at the Omarama Airfield.

Two single Astirs and an LS4 gliders were available for the solo-rated pilots, while three dual seated gliders were available for the instructors and students to use.

Andrew, who has a background in outdoor education, said the week was as much about youth development as it was about learning to fly a glider.

It was the old adage – “it takes a village to raise a child”, he said.

“They come out as better citizens – for me it was gliding that got me through the teen years.”

Like many of the team of volunteer instructors, winch operators and tow plane pilots, cooks and other helpers, who gave up their time to help out on the camp, it was about “giving back”, he said.

In the past some of the gliding greats – like Graham Erikson – had been instructors and mentors.

The camps had launched a mix of young people, “introverts and extroverts” into either a life-long interest in, or a career in aviation. Andrew said.

YouthGlide 2023 from an instructor's perspective...

By Ōmārama pilot Malcolm Wright

YouthGlide 2023 in Ōmārama was my first camp with full involvement, primarily as a gliding instructor.

If you thought teaching your teenager to drive a car with L-Plates is scary, well try putting them in an unpowered aircraft, hooking on a rope behind a winch or a plane and sending them skyward!

Ok, in your car there is only one steering wheel and basic controls, but in the glider, you are teaching from the back seat and can't stop, You can't kick them out halfway to your destination or have a pit stop. Imagine if they threw a tanty?! You are there for the duration as an instructor until you are on the ground safely at zero knots or zero kilometres per hour.

Every year YouthGlide and the Ōmārama Gliding Club hold a camp when the conditions should be fair enough to teach young people the fine art of gliding. Each of them individuals, with differing backgrounds and differing levels of aviation experience - every student has to start somewhere. So, over the week, each instructor has a few students to focus on, developing their skills to have fun and to reach their own personal goals flying gliders.

Before every flight each student is schooled up on what to do or what not to do. They go fly and then hold a debrief afterwards, with the instructor signing off on competent tasks and preparing a lesson plan on how to do it better next time. Each lesson the student gets more stick and rudder time until all facets of the flight from take-off to landing and all the stuff in the middle is done without the instructor having to take over.

During this year's camp there were many goals reached, including three first solo flights, and I had the pleasure of training one of them intensively over the week to reach her goal of flying solo.

Leah Ruddick, after having a check flight with another senior instructor to make sure that I had done my job, was sent solo with parents, friends and fellow students all watching every moment - nerves on the ground and in the air - followed by big smiles afterwards. The satisfaction of all is bliss! And let's not forget the traditional dousing with a bucket of cold water to mark the student's first solo!

Teaching young people to overcome fears, anxiety and other modern day social issues, working together, living together, gaining life skills and the discipline to be responsible for themselves and others in control of an aircraft gives an amazing feeling of satisfaction.

YouthGlide camp Omarama 2023, was a great success. Thank you to all who participated in and contributed to the camp.

*Leah Ruddick, of the Wanganui Manawatu Gliding Club, receives the traditional dousing in cold water after completing her first solo flight under the instruction of glider pilot Malcolm Wright at last month's Youth Glide New Zealand Soaring Development Camp at the Ōmārama Airfield.

Omarama Volunteer Fire Brigade

Happy New Year everybody on behalf of the team at Fenz Ōmārama.

We hope you had a nice break.

Firstly, I would like congratulate our long standing Brigade member Station Officer Maurice Cowie on being awarded a Queens Service Medal in the New Year Honours list.

We have certainly moved on from the floods in the middle of last year and it is now very dry.

As I am writing this I hear a brigade is out putting out a grass fire caused by sparks from a mower. The same could easily happen here.

Let's be vigilant when doing any activities that can create a spark including mowing hay and the lawns at home.

Remember we are currently in a Prohibited fire season.

You can still use the BBQ but it is a good idea to have a hose handy just in case.

The kids are off to school this week so please keep an eye out for them at bus stops and on their bikes.

Stay Safe

Ōmārama Golf Club

By Christine Bowman

The golf course has been busy over the Christmas break, with all the great weather. We have had approximately 285 visitors playing on the course over this period, with many complimenting the course especially the greens.

Prior to Christmas the annual Runholders Ambrose tournament was held.

A big thanks to all the sponsors and supporters, especially the main sponsor David O'Neill Contracting. Players enjoyed BBQ meat supplied by Alliance Group and cooked to perfection by Greg Stuart.

The bragging rights for 2022 go to Team Twin Peaks, lead by Kim and Mike Doree. . It was a great turnout, with teams of runholders, workers, friends, partners and children. It's great to hear all the laughter around the course. (Photos below)

As already reported, our New Year Tournament was a great success.

Our next main tournament is Easter weekend on Saturday, April 8, so save this date.

If you are interested in joining the club please contact Christine 027 209 2320 we have a couple of membership options.

Here's one solution and ratepayers fund this through the Environment Canterbury Rate. The Twizel-Tekapo Community Car. Here's how it works... The Twizel Community Care Centre (above) takes the bookings: Driven by volunteers, the car can be booked and used by anyone in Ōmārama to get you to nearby towns or cities for medical appointments or shopping visits – e.g to Twizel and back or Kurow and includes trips to Oamaru, Dunedin or Christchurch etc. There is a minimal charge depending on the destination.

Ōmārama Rodeo Club

By Marcia Green

Thank you to all who came along to the Ōmārama Rodeo 2022, to our cowboy and cowgirl competitors for putting on such a great show, to our incredible sponsors and supporters, the amazing stock contractors and the extra-ordinary equine and bovine athletes, they were awesome.

To the yard workers, our many volunteers, our hard working committee and all the people behind the scenes that make a day like this possible.

Thank you to the loyal locals who helped out on day... after five years we finally made a profit $12,500!!

That will pay for our maintenance upgrades for last two years.

A large crowd watched the competition play out in what was the club's 35th rodeo.

We're already planning how to make the day bigger and better for 2023! We hope we'll see you there!

Ōmārama Community Garden

By Heather Smith

Things are progressing with the Community Gardens down at the Ōmārama Community Centre.

The raised garden plots built by the Ōmārama Shed Group are about to be filled with topsoil, hopefully this week - with thanks to Maurice Cowie for help with this part of the project, and Travis and Jo Golder for the loan of the truck.

Several people have already volunteered to help and are donating seeds.

Hopefully in the next few weeks I'll be at least on two legs again so it will be very exciting to get our first veggies in for the new year.

Getting around on Colin Herd's old scooter has had me out, and a lot of locals are ready to get into it, so we are all super excited.

Ōmārama Airfield Ltd

By Clive Geddes, Chairman, Ōmārama Airfield Ltd

Over the past four months activity on the Omarama Airfield has shown an encouraging increase on the previous two years. The Regional and National gliding championships and the Youth Glide camp have all been successfully staged and there has been a welcome return of the UK and US based glider pilots who use Omarama as a summer soaring base. The Omarama Gliding Club and Youth Glide have also been contributors to the increased activity with well attended courses and growing memberships.

The airfield has also hosted a number of “fly in” aviation events which have added to the activity levels.

In addition to the day to day maintenance and management work the airfield company is progressing a number of projects including the development on Nimbus Drive, the establishment of a dedicated winch launching strip and rationalising the irrigation system.

Like most other Omarama business's, the company is looking forward to continuing to grow its activity and leave behind the difficulties of the past two years. The current year has been a good start to that recovery.

Ōmārama School

Omarama School seeks new principal

DAISY HUDSON
@alliedpress.co.nz

Omarama School is starting the new year with a limited statutory manager in place, and will soon have a new principal.

Christchurch special counsel Madeleine Hawkesby was appointed to the limited statutory manager role late last year.

This week she confirmed the school would also be looking for a new principal, following the resignation of Michelle Green.

Ms Green, who is on leave, resigned, effective from April 6.

Geraldine Sumner is acting principal for the first school term, when a recruitment process for a new principal will take place.

Ministry Te Tai Runga leader Nancy Bell said Ms Hawkesby was appointed after the school's board approached the ministry seeking support.

She has the functions, duties and powers as an employer to manage communications and advise on board policies and procedures.

"By far the majority of schools operate successfully but a small number develop areas of concern that they cannot resolve without outside help.

"We always work with schools to support them to resolve problems themselves, and only intervene as a last resort.

"Where we do step in, an intervention aims to bring expertise

Madeleine
Hawkesby

and a fresh perspective."

The aim of any intervention was always to return the school to full self-management as soon as the recommendations of the intervention had been met, she said.

"We monitor all school interventions closely, as we will be doing with Omarama School."

Ms Hawkesby said she could not comment on why she had been appointed, but said her key function was as the employer of the principal.

"On a day-to-day basis this involves providing support to the principal and creating accountability in order to ensure the principal is fulfilling the requirements of their role as the manager and educational leader of the school."

She expected to be in the role for 12 months, at which time it would be reviewed by the Ministry of Education.

TARGETED WEED CONTROL PROGRAMME

From early February we will be using helicopters for aerial spraying of targeted weeds on rivers across the region including the Lower Waitaki, Upper Waitaki, Te Ana a Wai (Tengawai), North Opuha, Ōpihi and Rangitata rivers.

Weed control clears the active part of the river channel that carries fast flowing water during floods and protects biodiversity.

The riverbeds will be surveyed, and only targeted weeds will be sprayed.
